COMMITTEES MEET AND REPORT PROGRESS

Over One Thousand Dollars Needed For Literary Exercises, Decoration and Parade—No Figures on the Ball.

The committees arranging the Fourth of July celebration met yesterday afternoon at 2 o'clock in the Capitol building. Those present were Governor Cooper, chairman; J. A. Gilman, J. H. Boyd, J. A. Kennedy, M. Campbell, A. E. Murphy and W. R. Farrington.

W. R. Farrington reported for the literary committee. This committee would need about $400 to carry out its plan of having the exercises in the Opera House. The exercises would probably consist of three short speeches and a musical program. The Amateur Orchestra would render its services and probably also the Kamehameha School Glee Club in case the vacation did not interfere. The exercises would probably take about an hour and a half or less.

A. E. Murphy reported next on behalf of the decoration committee. This committee based its calculations upon having the ball on a lanai in the Capitol grounds. In this case the decoration of the lanai, the assembly room in the Capitol and the entrances would cost about $250. These figures were based upon the expense of similar arrangements made at the inauguration ball.

Marston Campbell reported for the ball committee, stating that while this committee had not as yet held a regular meeting, he had spoken with several members who were all in favor of having the ball on a lanai in the Capitol grounds. No estimate had been made of the expenses connected with it but the committee was to meet soon.

J. H. Boyd reported for the parade committee, stating that the expenses for floats, etc., would probably amount to about $800 and J. A. Kennedy reported that the work of the fireworks and illumination committee was progressing. This committee would need about $1500 to $2000 to make a good display.

The sports committee was called for but there was no representative present. The meeting then adjourned. Chairman Cooper stating that he would send the members of the various committees notice to be on hand with their reports at the next meeting which will take place next Saturday at the same time and place.
